SOME SMILES

Strictly Wholesale

Today the business enterprises of Wilmont and Gerber are world-wide. Everyone knows that John Wilmont is the millionaire who discovered the remarkable business talent of Frank Gerber. And made him a partner which in turn made Frank Gerber also a millionaire. But how did it all start? This is the only true account of how they met. And also how John Wilmont spotted a man with such tremendous energy and ideas.

Turn back the clock five years. On a pleasant summer day, John Wilmont took a walk. He turned down a side street and spotted a jewelry store. The sign in the window read: "I sell watches to you at exactly the price I pay for them. No catch. Check on me."

That made the millionaire curious. He went into the store. Asked to see a Piedmont wrist watch. The price was $26.52. The millionaire looked at the watch and the price tag.

"It is impossible for you to sell this watch at your cost. You must make money for rent, overhead, and your profit," he said.

"Check with the manufacturer," was the reply. "I know who you are. I saw the article about you in the Sunday newspaper."

The millionaire left the store. Went to his office. Called the manufacturer and was told what Frank Gerber said was correct. Then he returned two days later and bought the watch.

"You tell me your secret and I'll put you on my payroll for a hundred thousand dollars a year," he said.

"All my customers will be highly thrilled and satisfied. So they will come back here for watch repairs. That's where I make the money. I have 2 watch repair men in the back working overtime."

The Answer

I was raised on the "East Side" of a large city. To be specific, I lived on Fifth Street between Avenue B and Avenue C. Every area had its "gang" for mutual protection. It was dangerous to go and visit another area alone. From time to time these "gangs" engaged in warfare. Ashcan covers were used as shields; broom handles and baseball bats were the weapons; and kids on the roof-tops dropped bags full of water on the invaders.

Our gang leader was called "Toughie." As soon as a new kid moved on the block, Toughie went into action. Of course, after he had licked that kid, he told him he had to join the gang. In the backyards of buildings we built small fires and roasted corn and potatoes. Well, this new kid moved into our area and he was sitting on a step of the building. Toughie got his boys together. "Know who I am?" he said to his first boy

"You are Toughie," was the correct reply. "You can lick anybody even with one hand tied behind your back."

After repeating this five times and getting the same answer he went up to the new kid who was smaller and thinner.

"Know who I am?" he asked.

"No," was the answer.

Toughie lead with his right but never made it. Later he learned the kid's old man was a prize fighter. He really got the works with his amazed followers too bewildered to do anything. Toughie met more than his match. But he still had his sense of humor.

"You don't have to get so mad just because you don't know the answer," he said. And then they shook hands.

The Prisons

King Louis decided that he wanted to go down in history as the enlightened monarch. So he would do things to make the lot of his people happier. Like building new roads, reducing taxes, and building more schools. Also keeping the country at peace with the rest of the world. But the Duke of Chambelon came to him with some sad news.

"Your Majesty," he began. "The prisons in this country are in a sad sad state. Reforms have to be made. We must listen to complaints. Even if they are criminals, they are still human beings."

So King Louis sent for Dr. Raymond Dunnier and told him the news which startled this famous man.

"I have just appointed you as Inspector General of our prisons. Name your salary and it is yours. But do your best to improve conditions."

So Dr. Raymond Dunnier first visited the ancient castle turned into a prison at Marton. He spoke to the first prisoner.

"What complaint do you have to make? I have full power to remedy things."

"I am innocent and do not belong here," he replied. "Now do something about it."

The next thirty prisoners all insisted that they too were innocent. A few admitted that they were guilty. But the food was terrible and the ventilation of the cells could be improved.

In his report to King Louis, the Inspector General wrote the following:

"After much meditation I conclude that we need two types of prisons in this country. One for those who are guilty and one for those who are innocent. And we will let the men who are in the innocent prison cook for those who are in the guilty prison."
